Abstract

The constitutionalism revolution bring out the suitable environment for the acceleration of news transmission and partly the growth of public awareness. For this reason, the free newspapers was one of the important achievements of constitutionalism revolution. This statement follows two main goals. One of them is the inspection of external form of the newspaper; such as print typing, letter, newspaper structure, and...., and the other is the investigation and analyzing main political and social matters of Khorasan state. The findings of research indicates that the Khorshid newspaper despite the existence of Besharat newspaper, was the important daily paper in Mashhad in constitutional period. This newspaper beside the attention to urban and suburban matters uses various political, satire and scientific articles proceed conspicuously and clearly the public opinions. The methodology of this paper is descriptive-analytic and on the basis of external form and content study of the Khorshid newspaper.
